Behavior Support and Response Procedures

Background

Behavior support begins with safety. When people do not feel physically and emotionally safe they may react to experiences from a place of survival (fear) rather than logic. Often this can lead them to make reactive decisions that are motivated by strong emotions, rather than behavior choices that are safe, healthy, and build relationships.

For example, imagine you are walking to your car at night and a loud noise startles you. Immediately, your brain decides if you should run away, fight off the danger, or freeze in fear. In this instant, your brain is not deciding what to do based on what the most logical choice is, but instead is reacting from a place of survival (fear). This same thing holds true for youth. When youth do not feel physically or emotionally safe, they are unable to make decisions about their behavior choices that are within the rules and expectations of the Club.

Behavior is an observable action and form of communication.

- Behavior is an action you can see or hear. For example, behavior could include things like words, facial expressions, tone, posture, and other body movements.
- Behavior is communication. Youth and adults communicate the way they think, feel, and how they experience the environment through their behavior. For example, you may observe a youth walking away with their head down. These observable actions tell you that the youth may need support.
- Behavior is rooted in culture. Our background, and how our parents/caregivers reacted to our behavior has shaped our ideas of “acceptable” and “unacceptable” behavior. For example, in some cultures making eye contact with adults is viewed as disrespectful, and others it is considered a sign of respect.

Behavior support is a process of understanding what youth are communicating with their actions and using that information to adjust their environment and teach skills that promote positive behavior.

- Behavior support involves understanding what youth are communicating through their behavior. For example, if a youth raises their voice and leaves the room following an interaction with a peer, you may interpret that to mean their interaction with their peer upset them.
- Behavior support involves using what we understand about the youth’s behavior to shape how we respond to it. For example, this may mean checking in with a youth to see what kind of support they need and adjusting your behavior and expectations based on their needs.

The 5 Guiding Principles of Behavior Support

- All behavior is communication.
- All youth are in the process of learning about their own behavior. As youth learn to meet expectations they will often act in ways that are challenging or concerning.
- People interpret behavior based on culture, upbringing and experience.
- Behavior is an opportunity to learn how youth respond to their environments, and the skills they are working on in those spaces.
- Behavior support is a team approach that should include the youth, parents, mentors, elders, or other caregivers, and supportive adults in the youth's life.

Positive Behavior Support:

- Understands that youth do well if they can, not if they want to
- Takes into account equity and cultural differences
- Understands individual youth needs (i.e. responds to individual differences among youth with insight and sensitivity), providing reasonable accommodations when able
- Is explicit, reasonable and timely
- Is logical, consistent, developmentally appropriate, and considerate of the circumstances
- Relies primarily on supportive environments, staff relationships, and positive youth development as prevention.
- Ensures parent and youth voice in the creation of management plans
- Increases the youth's awareness of the impact of their behavior and provides an opportunity to take full responsibility for it
- Builds a sense of community and its capacity for resolving conflict and maintaining a positive culture
- Teaches youth responsibility, regulation, and how to solve their own problems
- Tries to get at the root of the need behind the behavior
- Utilizes Trauma Informed Care by prioritizing: Physical and emotional safety, stability and predictability, equity, empowerment and choice, and connecting with the positive adult mentor
- Recognizes that staff and Clubs need to examine, with a TIC lens, our environments, expectations, and communication to ensure we are truly setting our youth up for success

Club behavior support and response procedures take into consideration:

- Impact on the youth expressing behavior (loss of dignity, extreme emotional duress, threat of harm to self)
- Impact on others (physical harm, emotional harm, loss of property)
- Impact on the program (loss of ability to run programs, maintain safe and positive culture)
- Duration

- Frequency
- Age and developmental level of youth
- Individual circumstances
- Does the youth have a documented disability that impacts their behaviors or responses
- The Club's ability to provide reasonable accommodations
- The experience of the individual youth, including ACEs, as well as their strengths
- The experience of the larger Club community

Behavior responses or practices that are never acceptable at the Club:

- Restraint and seclusion
- Withholding of basic needs (food, water, bathroom use)
- Any form of physical punishment, including push-ups or running laps
- Verbal abuse (berating, taunting, name-calling)
- Emotional Abuse (belittling, threatening, shaming)

Negative behavior/group management looks like:

- Punishing a whole group for the actions of a few
- Yelling
- Excluding a youth from a program in a "time out" other than to calm down, regulate, or taking a break for safety
- Having a group of youth "owe the staff time" and sit in silence
- Calling a youth out in front of a group or making a negative example of them
- Sending a youth to a Peace Place, Calm Corner, or Front Desk as a form of punishment
